A Parent Support Adviser's role is mainly to support you and your child to get the very best from your school by providing support, advice and information. I will aim to support and help you in the following ways:

- Provide direct and confidential support with parents/carers in a school context.
- Offer support with your child's behaviour.
- Provide information about school matters.
- Give opportunities to meet with other parents/carers through regular events.
- 'Drop in' sessions.
- Provide families with learning opportunities.
- Offer a home visit.
- Provide access to parenting programmes.
- Finding other services to help.
- Approachable to solve problems.
- Offer help when changing classes or schools.

What Parent Support Advisers aim to achieve

- Build your confidence in dealing with difficult parenting issues and behaviours.
- Support better achievements and attendance at school.
- Help you to speak with the school.

I am not a parenting expert and would never profess to be. I realise that you know your child best and welcome working with you to achieve the best learning opportunities for them.
